When determining whether or not telework is appropriate, supervising managers must consider whether or not it is operationally feasible for the employee to perform the core duties of their job away from the worksite. Work to be performed from an alternate worksite must be part of the employee’s job description. Supervising managers should also consider whether the work performed can be adequately assessed to ensure that work is being performed and whether or not teleworking would pose any adverse risks to the operations of the department or City Colleges of Chicago. Specifically, supervising managers should consider the following questions:

- a) Can the work performed be monitored by output versus time spent doing the job?
- b) Is the job characterized by clearly defined tasks and deliverables?
- c) Is there sufficient work for the employee to perform away from the worksite?
- d) What are the technical and equipment needs required to perform the work and can those technical and equipment needs be readily accessed from home?
- e) Does the work require minimal need for on-site files, records, special equipment, software, or other resources?
- f) Does the work require limited need for face-to-face contact with the public or colleagues?
- g) Can communication with the public or colleagues be satisfied remotely?
- h) Can the work be performed remotely without unnecessary risk to the security of data, networks, or client confidentiality?
- i) If the position is managerial, can the employee effectively supervise their subordinate employees remotely?

4. Requirements for Telework

If a supervising manager determines an employee may work from home, then the following requirements apply:

- a) The employee must receive advance written approval from the supervising manager and Chief Talent Officer before telework can begin.
- b) The employee must continue to follow City Colleges of Chicago required time keeping through electronic means if available.
- c) The employee must work their regularly scheduled hours on City Colleges of Chicago business for each telework day.
- d) The employee must check e-mail periodically throughout the day and must be available via e-mail and phone.
- e) Employees must also complete a Telework Request. The Telework Request requires the employee to certify that his or her remote location includes a safe, private, and quiet space sufficient to allow the employee to perform the core duties of the job, and that the employee has technology and equipment needed to perform the job. The agreement also provides, among other things, that City Colleges of Chicago is not responsible for the costs of the employee's equipment and facilities utilized during telework, including without limitation home office space, internet, computer and phone equipment.

5. Termination of Telework

- a) The supervising manager or Chief Talent Officer may terminate any Telework Request or modify any Telework Request at any time.
- b) Any employee who is unable to abide by the terms of this Telework Policy and the applicable Telework Request must notify their supervising manager immediately. The supervising manager, in consultation with the Chief Talent Officer, is responsible for determining if the employee can continue to telework.
