

Student Learning Outcomes

1. Students will be knowledgeable of theories, principles and concepts of aging, public policy regarding aging, cross-cultural aspects of aging and best practices in the service delivery system.
2. Students will be knowledge of how the process of aging affects an individual's health, cognition, lifestyle and relationships within the family and the community-at-large.
3. Students will be knowledgeable of generic and specialized human services for older adults and the elderly including long-term care.
4. Students will communicate effectively with older adults and the elderly, their families and service providers.
5. Students will demonstrate the ability to transfer didactic, classroom learning into practice, working with older adults and the elderly in the community.
6. Students will follow the Professional Gerontologists Code of Ethics in all aspects of their work.
7. Students will be computer literate and knowledgeable of how various technologies can improve or maintain older adults' health, independent functioning and safety in the home and community.

